

Kärcher-Chef Jenner: Sauberkeit in Gesellschaft und Wirtschaft im Rückgang!

Kärcher-Chef Hartmut Jenner spricht über Sauberkeit, Werte und wirtschaftliche Herausforderungen in Deutschland im Interview.

Hartmut Jenner, CEO of Kärcher, opened up about his obsession with cleanliness in a recent interview with the „Augsburger Allgemeinen.“ He’s just as meticulous at home, admitting he often tidies up his own space on Saturdays. Even during flights, Jenner takes time to inspect his seat, warning others against this habit as it may lead to unsettling discoveries. He emphasized a broader societal concern, claiming that the values surrounding cleanliness and respect have significantly diminished in Germany, particularly in online interactions. Jenner expressed frustration over the impact of financial interests overshadowing communal participation.

He further critiqued the current economic landscape, arguing that Germany is losing its competitive edge due to high labor costs and stringent regulations. He believes that while the nation’s production site is at risk, the innovative spirit persists. Jenner noted the lack of response from government officials when addressing these challenges, although he appreciates the willingness of Baden-Württemberg’s Minister President, Winfried Kretschmann, to listen. Conversely, he criticized Federal Minister of Economics, Robert Habeck, for lacking the necessary economic insight to address such pressing issues. For more details, check the full report here.
